the Merchants in the Southeast Portion of the District. Who Claim the Right to a Voice in Local Matters.

Residents of Anacostia, or those seen by a Times man, are decidedly in favor of suffrage in the District of Columbia. They express themselves in no unmistakable language, because, as they state, the ballot, and the privilege of casting one, is the sacred birthright of every American citizen.

They say that it is wrong to deny them the franchise merely because they reside near the seat of the national government. On the principle of right and wrong, they aver that it is wrong to deny any citizen a vote so long as that citizen has performed his civic duty, and is entitled on all moral and legal grounds to cast a vote in the management of municipal and District affairs.

Following are a number of expressions of pinion gathered by Times reporters.

H. A. Griswoll, president of the Wash-ington and Anacostia Railroad Company, said: "I do not believe local suffrage would conduce to the welfare of the whole District. The present form of government has proved to be advantageous and equitable, both for the government and the District."

JAMES W. BARTLEY, dealer in agricultural implements, No. 32 Monroe street: "I regard it as an outrage that we are not entitled under the law to vale for our own offlore, and ler the law to vote for our own officers, and that we are not given representation in Con-gress. I am in favor of securing the elective franchise for the District, but I would have it properly restricted. The tax-payers should have a voice in the conduct of the city affairs, and it is a great injustice that we are denied that priviles."

that privilege."

J. A. Warson, M. D., No. 201 Monroestreet:
"I think every qualified citizen of the United States ought to have a voic. A man should have education enough to intelligently east a vote, and I am therefore in favor of an educational and not a property qualification. I am in favor of giving the District the right of suffrage. As it now is the people have nothing to say in the public affairs, and those in authority can do just about as they please."

J. FRANK CAMPBLIL, of J. T. Campbell & Son dealers in hardware and region No. 18 Son, dealers in hardware and paint, No. 10 Monroe street: "I think we ought to have the right to vote. The way it is now we are treated like a lot of children. We ought to

I happened to have been born in the Unnited States and am an American citizen, yet every foreigner that comes to this country may, by a residence of five years, get to exercise more rights than I who have lived here all my life. When the wheels struck one end of the rail the other end tilted up, and I tell you it made a nervous man seasick the first time he traveled over that line. We had no telegraph wire, and so could do pretty much as we pleased around Columbia, the superintendent bein' located at

Suits for Divorce and Other Litigation That Brings Fat Fees to

Lawyers' Pockets. Susie Bealle yesterday entered a bill of divorce from her husband, Joseph A. Bealle. The parties were married in Forrestville. Prince George's county, Md., August 30, 1888, by the Rev. Mr. Anderson, an Episcopal minister. She charges that her husband deserted her July 24, 1892. Since her marriage Bealle has assaulted her at least forty times, become an habitual wife-beater, has frequently injured her in his assaults upon her, and the day before her baby died he brutally assaulted her by striking her in the eye with his fist. She asks for absolute divorce and the custody of her child named Pearl.

He states that in 1889 he was appointed a watchman in the Pension Office, and, although he has frequently asked her to return to him, she steadily refuses to do so. He asks for the custody of his 11-year-old child.

A suit for divorce was entered yesterday by Nannie G. Cook from her husband, George W. Cook. The papers in the case were withdrawn immediately on filing.

James M. Harbinson yesterday entered suit against the Metropolitan Railroad Company to recover $6,000 damages for injuries received by him while a passenger on one of the cars on May 12, 1894. He claims that he boarded an eastbound car at the corner of Seventh and F streets northwest, and while standing on the side step of the open car he was violently knocked down by a westbound car, and received severe injuries.

YESTERDAY IN THE SENATE.

Still at Work on Appropriation Bills, of Which Three Yet Remain.

Two more appropriation bills-the legislative, executive, and judicial and the District of Columbia were disposed of by the Senate vesterday. The agricultural appropriation bill was also onsidered, and was on the point of being passed, but there were several individual amendments left to be considered to-morrow. This leaves but three more appropriation bills to be considered, the Indian, sundry civil, and deficiency appropriation bills, and of these only the first has come from the committee.

The anti-option bill, which has been on the Vice President's table since it came from the House several weeks ago, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The conference report on the military academy bill was agreed to.

The only important discussion on the agricultural bill was on the question of allowing the Secretary of Agriculture to have discussion on the discussion of the secretary of Agriculture to have discussions on the secretary of the secreta cretionary power in the appointment and pay of clerks, a proposition voted down, because it gave a preference to one Secretary in exusion to the others.

ADMINISTRATION APPROVED.

House Passes a Resolution Indorsing the Course of the Government on the Strike. The House yesterday, by a vote of 125 to 27, adopted a resolution offered by Mr. Mc-Creary, of Kentucky, indorsing the action of the President and the administration in suppressing lawlessness in connection with the strike. It was as follows:

"Resolved, That the House of Representaresolved, that the House of Representa-tives indoress the prompt and vigorous efforts of the President and his administration to suppress lawlessness, restore order and pre-vent improper interference with the enforce-ment of the laws of the United States and with the transportation of the mails of the United States and with interstate commerce, and piedges its hearty support, and deems the success that has already attended its ef-forts a cause for proper and general con-cretibilities." gratulation.' It was adopted under suspension of the rules, only thirty minutes being allowed for

Mr. McCreary made a few remarks on the propriety of the resolution, and then amid cries of "vote, vote," Mr. Pence took the floor. He thought the resolution too bread. It indorsed all officers of the administration, including the attorney-general, who had used the power of an injunction in behalf of a road in which he was interested.

He protested against the omnibus injunction. Mr. Pence made an effort to extend the debate, but failed.

Mr. Catchings then closed with a brief speech, declaring that the Federal government could go wherever it was necessary to go when occasion arose. He commended the Attorney General and said his action had inspired admiration and confidence, and that the courage and determination of the President had administered a lasting lesson to men who claimed the right to inverfers with hose. who claimed the right to interfere with bostness. The resolution was then adopted by the vote given above, Messrs. Pence and Hep-burn failing to muster strength enough for the "ayes and noes."

Ar in the Interior Department The ax is beginning to fall in the Interior Department. A great many changes will oc-our in August and clerks are feeling squeamish None of them, however, feel secure, There is a good deal of uneasiness. Secretary Hoke Smith has under advisement the promotion and reduction of 130 men. The changes will affect clerks in all the classes of from $900 to $2,000 annually. In the Secretary's office there will not be many changes.

Complaints from the American steamship companies against the working of certain branches of the immigration laws have occupied the attention of the House Committee on Immigration at its last three sessions, the particular detail of the system with which the shipping interests are dissatisfied being the shipping interests are dissatisfied being the arrangement governing limmigrants who land at Canadian points bound for the United States. It is the contention of the steamship companies that the system gives an advantage to their Canadian competitors, since the ships landing at United States ports are obliged to return at their own expense all immigrants who prove to be paupers or excensivity, or become public charges within a year after their arrival. Superintendent Stump told the committee that the only alternative was to police the Canadian border and have the inspection carried out there, a system have the inspection carried out there, a system which would entail great expense, if it would not be entirely impracticable.

DIED. On Monday, July 16, 1894, at 8,20 p.

m., after a long and painful illness, Saran, beloved wife of John H. Saunders, in the 5th year of her age.

Funeral from her late residence, 1425 Satreet northwest, on Wednesday, July 18, at 3 o'clock p.m. Relatives and friends respectfully invited as if we had been sittin' on the haircloth sofa in her parlor, her lips half open and the wind blowin' her hair all over my face. Mighty sweet it smelled, too, but I hadn't much time the only thing for us to do was to watch our chance and go off on the quiet to some place and go off on the quiet to some place dought him. I thought it over for several days and got the whole thing in shape. I told Mollie to come down to the roundhouse about 7 o'clock one night and I would take her for a little ride on my engine. She her for a little ride on my engine. She her find the ride on my engine. She her for a little ride on my engine. She her for a little ride on my engine in the roundhouse, Mollie was awaitin. and and he was on hand when I backed out on the main track, leavin' Jim's engine in the roundhouse. Mollie was awaitin', and and the was on hand when I backed out on the main track, leavin' Jim's engine in the roundhouse. Mollie was awaitin', and and the was on the tank, like an engineer's sweet-man and out Jim came around the corner. His eyes opened, I tell you.

"Where are ye goin', Bill?" he shouted.

"Just out for a little ride," I remarked, but I me, so I had to put my arms around her to in the put my arms around her to in the me, so I had to put my arms around her to in the me, so I had to put my arms around her to in the me, so I had to put my arms around her to in the cover in the content of the minutes we were spinnin', in three hummin', and in five minutes we were tearin' in two minutes we were tearing thumin', and in five minutes we were to the take of the thumin', the paffin' of the exhaust was so rapid as to blend into hollow thunder. A whirlpool of sparks became visible, and then, with a hop, skip and a jump, Jim's engine passed us like a streak of runaway lightnin', the occupants never dreamin' we were in the sidin.

"We hunted up the nearest preacher and got married; me, with my face all black and grimy, and Mollie without any hat, for the wind had blowed it away. Jack was witness, and I left him kiss the bride for I thought he deserved it. We got to Columbia about midnight, and next mornin' I took out the express as if nothin' had happened.

"What became of Jim? Why, the blame fool actually run right straight abead all night, till he reached Charlotte next mornin'. He was the worst surprised man in the satio when he found we had given him the alip. Then the superintendent wanted to know that he meant he halfe.

"In less time than it takes to toil it we were on the sidin', the switch reset for the main track, and then I run up in the woods and stopped. We shut off all lights and waited.

"In a minute or two we heard a faint rumble, which changed into a roar, then we could distinguish the clickety-click of wheels passin' over the ends of rails, the rattle of well."—Philadelphia Times.
